TECHNOLOGY IN THE WORKPLACE

One of the main challenges in business today is utilizing technology to help achieve business-related goals. Ever so often employees, and even those employees evaluating and recommending technology enhancements, view these changes negatively and this has a large impact on your workforce.

The goal of technology in the workplace is to help achieve your business goals, not to limit them or hold back the workforce. Technology is one of the greatest tools we have at our fingertips that can help us do more in less time. Sure, email can often be a nuisance and just another item that takes up time in your day, but could your organization survive without it? A website may be one more thing you need to update and keep current as your organization grows, but with the amount of Web users today, can you afford to not have a functional and appealing site? No matter how much it appears to be a nuisance, technology helps.

Whether you need a new website or redesign, a network enhancement, server implementation, security assessment, or a custom application, Delco Computer is here to help you. Worry less about the pains of IT and concentrate more on achieving your business goals. Contact us today at 610-616-3946 or www.delcocomputer.com.

CASE STUDY: Behunin & Associates

Behunin & Associates, P.C. is a Pennsylvania based IT consulting firm specializing in IT audit, IT internal audit outsourcing, data analysis, and privacy consulting for pharmaceutical, insurance, manufacturing, technology, and retail organizations.

B&A relied on Delco Computer in November 2007 for a facelift of their current website. They were not positive at the time on what changes they needed to make, but management came to the realization that with a growing workforce and the need to recruit additional employees, it had come time to make their website more appealing to clients and potential recruits.

B&A consulted Delco Computer to prototype a new design to meet their liking. After being shown a number of potential designs, and throwing in a few additional requirements, a design was selected and developed. B&A had a tight timeframe for the website project and Delco Computer was able to meet the demands of the redesign and also handled a number of new ideas along the way.

"In developing our new website, Delco Computer knew just what we needed and was able to deliver exactly what we wanted," says Sean Lovison, an IT Consultant at B&A. "We had a very strict deadline and they were able to prototype, design, develop, fine-tune and implement our site regardless of our tight timeframe. We were very impressed with the professionalism, collaborative skills, and patience illustrated throughout all of our design and content changes that we asked them to complete. We couldn't have formed our ideas into a website without them."
